Rescuing Lives Today – Making a Difference in Tomorrow

Alble-Emanuel

Kissable! That's just a fact! This is a face that begs to be kissed! Sweet, innocent, charming. Love at first sight. But that's just me.

His father didn't think so. When Alble-Emanuel's mother died in childbirth, he was considered a curse by his father's family. Her death was his fault. He had brought evil into their home and he must be sacrificed.

Thankfully, before his grandparents or father could harm him, he was snatched away and rushed to the Canaan Center 2 Orphanage. Just a short distance away in the village. Another success story. Another child rescued from certain death! Another child who will now have the opportunity to grow into a God fearing young man who can touch his country-perhaps the world with his unique gifts and talents. Talents that would have perished with him, in a mud hut on the edge of a forgotten village in a war torn country. If it had not been for supporters like you.

As you read this, I am in Africa, visiting Casa Emmanuel Orphanage in Guinea-Bissau, where there are dozens of babies just like Alble. I promise I am kissing each and every one. Telling them that in America, there are people who love them, people who care that there is a place of safety. Where they can be nurtured and secure. For all the babies in Life link homes around the world, THANK YOU FOR SAVING OUR LIVES!

God bless!

Together for the Children, Connie

(We will be in Africa Oct 18 – Oct 27. Please pray for our safety as we travel. Thank you!)

Just a few of the little ones I will be kissing!
